UM RECEIVES $2,000
BUSINESS LECTURES GRANT

MISSOULA---

A $2,000 grant to the University of Montana will be used to support a series of lectures on the practice of business management and the relationships of business to science.

The grant is one of 37 to colleges and universities throughout the nation from the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. through the S & H Foundation Inc. UM won the grant in competition with more than 420 institutions of higher learning.

First of four lectures in the UM program will be Nov. 1, when Dr. Gary M. Andrew, an associate professor in the University of Minnesota School of Business Administration, discusses systems in life, science and business.

Other speakers in the program will include Dr. Raymond G. Hunt, psychology department, State University of New York; Dr. Ronald S. Paul, senior member, corporate staff of the Battelle Memorial Institute, Seattle, Wash., and Dr. James Alcott, Economic Development Division, Midwest Research Institute, Kansas City, Mo.

The S & H Foundation Lectureship Program, established in 1960 as part of the S & H Co.'s program of aid to education, has awarded 283 grants to more than 200 colleges and universities since 1960.

Dr. George J. Brabb, professor of business administration and management at UM, will be campus coordinator for the lecture series on the Missoula campus.

Accepting the grant for the University were Dr. Brabb and Dr. Donald Emblen, dean of the UM School of Business Administration, and Dr. Norman Taylor, UM vice-president for research.
